1. Welcome to Northstar

- Northstar Technologies is a fictional software and services company used to demonstrate the OnboardIQ employee knowledge platform.
- Our working principles are respect, accountability, customer focus, learning, and responsible handling of information.
- This handbook is a starting point for common workplace questions. Department-specific procedures may add details, but approved company policy takes precedence.

2. Working arrangements

Standard schedule

- The sample standard workweek is Monday through Friday. Team schedules, shifts, client coverage, and flexible-work arrangements may differ by role.
- Employees should confirm their working hours, time zone, attendance method, and break arrangements with their manager during onboarding.

Remote and hybrid work

- Employees approved for remote or hybrid work must protect company information, use approved devices and collaboration tools, and remain reachable during agreed working hours.
- Do not work with confidential information in public spaces where screens or conversations can be observed. Use a private network or approved secure connection.

Attendance and time off

- Notify your manager as early as practical if you will be late or absent. Submit leave requests through the designated HR system and wait for approval where required.
- For emergencies or unexpected illness, follow your team's absence-notification process. Do not share medical details more widely than necessary.

3. Workplace conduct

- Treat colleagues, customers, vendors, and visitors with dignity and professionalism.
- Harassment, discrimination, bullying, threats, retaliation, and deliberate exclusion are not acceptable.
- Raise concerns with your manager, People Operations, or the designated reporting channel. If your manager is involved in the concern, use another reporting route.
- Employees must disclose actual or potential conflicts of interest and must not use their role for improper personal benefit.

4. Communication and collaboration

- Use company-approved email, chat, meetings, and file-sharing tools for business information.
- Keep messages respectful and clear. Document important decisions, owners, and due dates in the team's agreed workspace.
- Do not send passwords, access tokens, or confidential employee data in ordinary chat messages.
- Invite only relevant people to meetings and restrict shared documents to the people who need access.

5. Performance and learning

- Managers should agree on role expectations, goals, and feedback cadence with each employee.
- Employees are encouraged to maintain a learning plan and ask for support when a task, process, or policy is unclear.
- Training requirements may vary by role and may include security awareness, privacy, code of conduct, and role-specific systems.

6. Expenses and company property

- Use company equipment and accounts primarily for authorized business purposes and follow the applicable acceptable-use rules.
- Submit business expenses with accurate receipts, business purpose, and required approvals within the published deadline.
- Return company property and revoke or transfer access as directed when changing roles or leaving the company.

7. Getting help

Question or issue	First point of contact
Leave, benefits, employee records	People Operations / HR portal
Laptop, account, software access	IT Service Desk
Security incident or suspicious message	Security team immediately
Project priorities or team process	Manager or team lead
