1. Leave and attendance

- This sample guide does not define legal entitlements, exact leave balances, or statutory requirements. Employees must consult the employer's current approved policy and applicable local rules.
- Submit planned leave through the approved HR system as early as practical and obtain required approval before making non-refundable plans.
- For unexpected absence, notify your manager using the agreed channel and update the HR system when able.
- If your leave balance appears incorrect, contact People Operations with the relevant dates and system reference. Avoid sharing unnecessary medical details.

2. Payroll and employee records

- Use the official HR or payroll portal to review payslips, tax documents, bank details, and personal information.
- Never send bank credentials, one-time passwords, or full payment-card details to someone claiming to be HR.
- For a payroll discrepancy, provide the pay period, a clear description, and supporting information through the approved secure channel.
- Changes to bank or tax details may require verification; follow the official workflow and do not rely solely on an email request.

3. Benefits and reimbursements

- Eligibility, coverage, limits, deadlines, and required documents vary by plan and location. Consult the latest approved benefits guide.
- Before making an expense, confirm that it is business-related, eligible, within limits, and approved where required.
- Submit accurate receipts and descriptions. Never alter receipts or claim the same expense twice.
- If a claim is rejected, review the reason and contact the designated benefits or Finance team for clarification.

4. Employee support directory

Topic	Contact / system	Include in your request
Leave or attendance	HR portal / People Operations	Dates, leave type, manager approval if applicable
Payroll or payslip	Secure payroll support	Pay period and discrepancy description
Benefits	Benefits administrator	Plan name and question
Workplace concern	People Operations or approved reporting channel	Factual summary and safe contact method
Work equipment or access	IT Service Desk	Device, system, error, business impact

- Insert actual contact names, email addresses, portal links, and response-time commitments only after the company approves them.

5. Privacy and sensitive requests

- Share employee information only through approved channels and only with people who need it to resolve the issue.
- If a request asks for sensitive information unexpectedly, verify the request using a trusted contact method.
- Keep copies of case numbers and relevant communications, but do not store sensitive records in personal folders or unapproved apps.
