Fictional demonstration policy for the OnBoardIQ environment. The leave balances and procedures below are sample company rules and must be reviewed against applicable Indian central/state laws and approved employment terms before real-world adoption.

1. Purpose

This policy establishes consistent expectations for attendance, working hours, leave eligibility, leave requests, absence reporting, and attendance records at Northstar Technologies Pvt. Ltd. It is intended to support employee wellbeing while ensuring predictable team and business operations.

2. Scope

This policy applies to all full-time and part-time employees of Northstar Technologies Pvt. Ltd. Employees working in shifts or under location-specific arrangements must also follow any additional schedule communicated by their manager. Contractors, consultants, and interns are governed by their engagement agreements and applicable provisions communicated to them.

3. Working days and standard hours

The standard schedule for Mumbai-based office teams is Monday to Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., with a reasonable meal break. The normal working week is 40 hours, excluding the meal break. Specific teams may follow approved shift schedules or customer-aligned hours.

Employees are expected to:

- Be ready to begin work at the scheduled start time.
- Record attendance using the company-approved attendance or HR system.
- Remain reasonably available during agreed working and collaboration hours.
- Inform their manager promptly about delays, early departures, or unexpected absence.
- Coordinate handovers when their absence may affect customers, operations, or deadlines.

4. Attendance recording and corrections

Employees must accurately record their attendance through the designated HR platform, office access system, or other approved method. Employees must not record attendance on behalf of another person or ask another person to do so. If a punch, login, or attendance entry is missed or incorrect, the employee should submit a correction request with the reason and relevant details as soon as possible. Managers review and approve corrections; People & Culture maintains the official record.

5. Leave categories and annual entitlement

The following are the sample annual entitlements for an eligible full-time employee. Entitlements may be prorated for employees joining or leaving during the year. Part-time, fixed-term, and other employment categories may have different entitlements under their agreements and applicable law.

Leave category	Sample entitlement	Typical use
Annual / Earned Leave	18 working days per calendar year	Planned personal time, rest, travel
Casual Leave	6 working days per calendar year	Short personal matters or urgent needs
Sick Leave	6 working days per calendar year	Illness, medical appointments, recovery
Public Holidays	As per annual location holiday calendar	Company-declared public and festival holidays
Parental / Statutory Leave	As required by applicable law and eligibility	Maternity, paternity or other statutory entitlements

Leave category	Sample entitlement	Typical use
Unpaid Leave	Subject to approval	Exceptional circumstances after available paid leave is considered Important: These are illustrative Northstar demo entitlements, not a statement of statutory minimums. Applicable law and signed employment terms prevail where they provide different or greater rights.

6. Leave year, accrual, and balance

The leave year runs from 1 January to 31 December. Annual/Earned Leave is credited monthly at 1.5 working days per completed month of eligible service, subject to proration and the HR system's rounding rules. Casual and Sick Leave are credited at the start of the leave year or prorated on joining, as configured by People & Culture. Employees should check their available balance in the HR system before submitting a request.

Unused leave carry-forward, expiry, encashment, and treatment on separation will be governed by the approved leave schedule, employment terms, and applicable law. The HR system balance is an administrative record and should be raised with People & Culture if it appears incorrect.

7. Applying for planned leave

- Submit the request through the HR system, selecting the leave category, dates, and a brief reason where required.
- For planned leave of three or more consecutive working days, aim to submit the request at least 10 working days in advance.
- For shorter planned leave, aim to submit at least 3 working days in advance.
- Do not treat a request as approved until the HR system or authorized manager confirms approval.
- Before leave begins, document active work, hand over urgent responsibilities, and set an appropriate availability message where needed.

Managers should review requests fairly, consider team coverage, avoid unnecessary delays, and communicate the decision through the approved system. Business needs may require discussion of alternative dates, but statutory leave rights will be handled in accordance with applicable law.

8. Sick leave and unexpected absence

If illness or an emergency prevents an employee from working, the employee should notify their manager as soon as reasonably possible, preferably before the scheduled start time. If the employee is unable to make contact, a family member or authorized representative may notify the company where appropriate. The employee should record the leave in the HR system when able.

A medical certificate or supporting document may be requested for extended or repeated absences where permitted by applicable law and company procedure. Medical information must be handled confidentially and shared only with authorized personnel who need it for a legitimate purpose.

9. Late arrival, early departure, and missed attendance

Employees should inform their manager if they expect to arrive late or need to leave early. Repeated lateness, unexplained absence, or inaccurate attendance records may be discussed with the employee and addressed through a fair corrective process. A missed attendance entry should be corrected through the official process; employees must not alter records or provide misleading explanations.

10. Remote work and attendance

Employees approved to work remotely must follow their agreed work schedule, remain reachable through approved channels during collaboration hours, attend required meetings, and record attendance using the designated system. Remote work does not automatically change leave eligibility or the requirement to report an absence. Employees must work from an approved location and follow information-security requirements.

11. Leave during notice period and separation

Leave during a notice period must be requested and approved in the usual way, subject to employment terms and applicable law. The company will calculate outstanding leave, any permitted encashment, deductions, and final settlement according to the employee's agreement and applicable legal requirements. Employees should complete handover responsibilities before their final working day.

12. Roles and responsibilities

Role	Responsibilities
Employee	Record attendance accurately; request leave in advance; report unexpected absence; maintain handovers.
Reporting Manager	Review requests; plan coverage; approve or decline with a reason; address attendance concerns fairly.
People & Culture	Maintain policy and official leave records; clarify entitlements; administer corrections and escalations.
Payroll / HR Operations	Use approved attendance and leave data for payroll and statutory administration.

13. Exceptions, disputes, and escalation

Employees who believe their leave balance, attendance record, or leave decision is incorrect should first raise the matter with their manager or People & Culture. Exceptions require documented review and approval by the authorized People & Culture representative. Nothing in this policy is intended to restrict an employee's rights under applicable law.

14. Policy compliance and review

Falsifying attendance, misusing leave processes, or repeatedly failing to follow reasonable reporting requirements may result in corrective action in accordance with company procedure and applicable law. The People & Culture Department owns this policy and will review it at least annually or when legal or operational requirements change. Updated versions will be communicated through approved company channels.

15. Contact and acknowledgement

For questions about leave balances, eligibility, attendance corrections, or this policy, contact the People & Culture Department at people@northstar.example or submit a request through the HR system. The IT Helpdesk can assist with access or technical issues in the attendance platform.
